

wide range of individuals into action roles that spur further development. Few of us, however, have the luxury of being able to unify these virtues; combining original thought and the capacity to pass it on to others. I note one exception- RICHARD DOLEWSKI

! Always a pleasure to hear you speak! I also want to thank you for the warm and colorful (I will try not to wear it when I'm with the bulls in Tampa though... the red might provoke them... lol) sweater I was quite touched that someone with your obviously busy schedule would remember such a small detail. I am wearing it even as I type and I thank you sincerely for trying much looking forward to your next session. Best regards

Richard:

Thanks for asking me to come to the TUG meeting. To be honest, and I do mean this sincerely you are an excellent speaker. My colleague also commented the same, and guess what? The 2 hours went by real quickly (something very rare when attending a seminar). Ok, ok - please do not let the bubble burst today! Talk to you later

Richard:

You are wrong - your legs in person are much uglier Great presentation! Enjoy it tremendously. Common sense, but I guess management sometimes just does not get it. Keep up the good talks.

Richard:

Great show last night. TUG has really come a long way What a turn out! Is that the norm these days? Great speech with a lot of good content. Hello but you were pretty busy with things. Anyway, great to go to a quality TUG presentation again. Brian

Editor:

I am sending this to the expert really enjoyed last night's presentation on "Disaster Recovery". The content of the session and of course delivery (see superior delivery skills) were exceptional "comme toujours". I want to stress the last point (delivery) For some individuals carry the seed of brilliance, but their failure to communicate ideas effectively isolates that genius in a single mind. Other people, with perhaps less developed original thoughts, can deliver notions and concepts into the minds of the greater collective whole. They thus become the catalysts of formative evolutionary change and continuously inspire

Richard,

Congratulations on your presentation at TUG. It is very apparent why you were voted best new speaker at COMMON. I have heard many saying what an informative presentation it was and the ones that I spoke in person were very complimentary Very useful information.

HOW CAN THIS BE TRUE?

Below, the four parts are moved around.

The partitions are exactly the same as those used above.

From where comes this "hole"?
